Undersized Trout.

The case of The People against James Bryant, violating the game law, was called last evening before the Circuit Court. From a scanning of the case, it would appear that James is a disciple of Sir Isaac Walton, and takes delight in watching embryo "nibbles" develop into "bites," especially in the trout season. But it would further appear that James' "bites" too frequently resulted in landing diminutive trout, when he fished the roaring waters of Giles's Creek in Paris township, and as a consequence the heavy hand of the law came down on him for not returning them to their native element when less than six inches long. Sporting men are interested in this case, "just for instance," if from no other standpoint, as they all agree that by the enforcement of existing game laws they can only hope to sport from season to season.

The Unitarian Social.

Only a small number attended the Unitarian social, held at the Ladies' Literary Club rooms last evening. The Rev. Henry Powers sent regrets, and announced that the reason he could not attend was that he had received a telegram announcing the death of an intimate friend, Judge C. W. Stanley, of Manchester, N. H., and he wished the evening to better prepare a letter of condolence and sympathy to the bereaved widow.

The literary exercises consisted of the reading of selections from various authors, among the number being Hawthorne's "Banner of the Red Cross," Whittier's "Prophecy of Judge Samuel Sewall," and a number of the old Connecticut Blue Laws.

William Turner has finished at Florence, Italy, the statue of Commodore Perry, and the statue will be shipped soon for erection at Newport, R. I.

AMUSEMENTS.

Bartley Campbell's "Siberia" at Powers'—A Great Play.

A good audience, with enthusiasm worthy three times its number, witnessed the first presentation of Bartley Campbell's "Siberia" at Powers' Opera House last evening. The name of the play itself at once inspires thoughts of servitude, of cruelty, of loss of liberty, of tyranny of the lowest kind. The wilds of Siberia is but a name for the martyrdom of liberty, a prison wherein the exercise of the freedom of speech suffers the penalty of starvation and death; where mothers grow into maniacs through their efforts to keep the breath of life in innocent babes; where the defense of virtue is rewarded with short rations and the lash; where furnished men are made to work until they welcome death with an anthem of thanksgiving. All these sufferings and sorrows have men and women endured in Russia because they believed in liberty and had the courage to acknowledge their creed.

This is what inspired the play which created so much enthusiasm in the theatre last night. For strong lines, stirring situations and startling climaxes it excels anything ever before produced in Grand Rapids. Though the dialogue is powerful and full of thought, that must make anyone who loves personal rights and a voice in government, thrill with excitement. The effect is strengthened with appropriate scenery and picturesque stage pictures, though to do this it was necessary at times to crowd the stage. All moved with an ease and smoothness that was hardly looked for, considering that the stage was new to the company, and that the scenery had been placed upon it only a few hours previous to the use of the curtain. Even the supernumeraries, who had an unusual amount of marching and positions to perform, seemed to catch the eloquence of the play, and acquitted themselves with such precision and grace that entitles them to the credit of more than passing notice.

With such a motive, such an argument, and with material every line of which gives an impulse for action, the success which every where has attended the production is readily seen, sparkling with truth, with the portrayal of incidents that are even to-day living facts, and tableaux, emphasizes and impresses, it is a performance both intellectual and instructive with an abundance of scenery and accessories, the play last night was unquestionably better mounted than anything that has heretofore been produced here, and some idea can be obtained of the advantages the theatre-goers of the larger cities enjoy; for to witness a good play with a strong cast and a consideration of every surrounding and trivial detail, suggested in the location of drama itself, is a privilege rarely had in this city. Such a privilege does one realize in "Siberia," as presented at Powers' last night. No dazzling and unexpected were the many effects revealed, that it is difficult to do the entertainment justice without seeing it more than once. The company, and a large one it is, excellent, each and every one an actor. Unite them, what a satisfaction; every line spoken intelligently, and given its proper effect. Atkins Lawrence, who appeared here four years ago in the part of Fazio with Mary Anderson, has made such improvement that it was difficult at first to recognize him as Nicolai Ningoff. His personation was strong, inasmuch as it required delicate treatment, subduer, intense action, the suppression of emotion at times, almost on the outlines of endurance, and again an outburst of power in the climaxes. All these requirements accomplished without any exhibition of effort or force. Miss Belgrade's Sara, a part very similar in its demands to that of Mr. Lawrence, calling for strong action, varying in its many shades of feeling; though the lines were full of sympathy, she did not in any way display a realization of this fact, and gained her points and effects wholly on the merits of good acting. Mr. Norcross, Mr. Wood, Mr. Daly, Miss Vaders are entitled to more than mere mention, but lack of space forbids this morning. The play will be repeated again this evening. The engagement closes Saturday.

THE PINK-EYE.

Its Appearance Here, and Something of its History.

Now that pink-eye has again appeared among the horses of this city, the history and peculiarities of the disease should be looked up by veterinary surgeons and horsemen, in order that it may be handled intelligently, the surest remedies applied and the best safeguards maintained to prevent its spread. A distinguished specialist on the diseases of horses, claims that pink-eye is but another name for scarlet fever in horses, and that the first history of the disease among mankind, shows that it was simultaneous with a similar outbreak among horses in the year 1514. From that date until 1610 there is an unbroken chain of evidence that the two diseases are similar and transmissible from beast to man. Acting upon this impression, an experimenter inoculated some children with the virus of horses deceased with pink-eye, and obtained results which proved as conclusive as vaccination to prevent small-pox. Secretary Carrill, of the Board of Health, has some valuable data on the subject.

A PLAN FOR CHARITY.

The Suggestions of a Practical Man for Relief of the Poor.

As winter approaches and opinions widely differ as to whether it will be a hard or an open one, the thoughts of the charitable disposed go out to the poor who must necessarily endure much suffering and hardship. That this will be a winter of unusual hardship among the laboring men is already promised in the fact that a great many men with families on their hands are out of employment with no prospects of improving their condition until trade brightens up and the present depression in business is overcome. A TELEGRAM reporter had a talk with a leading citizen yesterday upon things in general, and among the themes discussed was the one hinted at above. "I know some families in this city," he said, "respectable ones, too, who are almost on the verge of abject destitution. In one family consisting of five persons, wife, husband and children, the husband has been out of employment for nearly two months, and has about exhausted all the means he had saved in keeping his home free from cold and hunger. He has always been a temperate, industrious man, but owing to the slack-up in business, his employers were compelled to let him go. The family are too proud to give any hint as to their wants to their friends and neighbors, and the outlook for them during the winter is painfully discouraging. There are many others that are no doubt in equally straitened circumstances, with absolutely no prospects of relief. They are all anxious and willing to work if work could be found, but there is about as much demand for labor at present among the industries of this city as there is a demand for prohibition among the liquor dealers. Now the generosity displayed by several citizens in providing for the poor on Thanksgiving, suggests an opportunity for a much nobler charitable undertaking in the same direction. There are at present many citizens, mechanics and laborers out of employment in this city with families dependent upon them, and the probabilities are that they will be compelled to live if they can do so, without work until Spring, and there are several hundred citizens who are well-to-do, sufficiently enough to afford to give a pittance toward keeping these people from want. Suppose a general poor fund was organized with special reference to such cases as have been mentioned. It seems that enough could be induced to subscribe say a quarter, a half or a dollar a month to keep in this fund sufficient means to provide for these families and guard against their suffering from cold and hunger. I believe there are any number of citizens who are able to contribute each month such sums as I have named. It is not one tithe of what a good many hundred of our spend each month foolishly, and if some energetic person will adopt such a scheme, and agitate it thoroughly, I believe he will meet with such response as will guard against anybody's suffering for lack of warmth and food. This is only a suggestion, and I believe there are many others if they think a minute can add such improvements as will make it respectable and insure its amounting to something practically."

THE TELEGRAM scribe coincided and bid the expounder of theoretical charity good day, and the "idea," hoping some may find in it some practical suggestions.

GONE, BUT NOT FORGOTTEN.

A Vacant Seat in a Telegraph Office and a Boarding House.

The Baltimore and Ohio Telegraph office, and a West Side landlady, are now both in mourning for the sudden departure of H. C. Wolever, an operator in the above-named office, who has not been seen since Monday evening last. At that date, and frequently since, the office, on account of a rush of work, was short-handed, and Wolever's presence was very desirable, as none knew better how to "jerk lightning" than he, or transcribe his tickings more rapidly. But he then said, "let the boys hustle away, it'll do 'em good. I have an engagement I want to keep with a friend to-night and can't work." Yesterday morning, a brother operator grew so curious about his lengthened "engagement," that he opened his trunk and found that Wolever's absence was no doubt intentional and would probably be indefinitely prolonged, as his entire wardrobe was missing, and his Saratoga contained naught but some suggestively labeled phials.

Wolever is a native of Belleville, Ontario, and has operated previous to his arrival here, at Port Huron, Detroit and Chicago. As an operator he has but few superiors, is quick, accurate, good-natured and polite, but evidently has a moral obliquity regarding the rights of landladies to receive a just compensation for board. His unpaid bill on the West Side is said to foot up the sum of $18.

Artificial Light.

In these days of progress there is a demand for better means of illumination than ever before. The dazzling brilliancy of the electric light makes our common kerosene lamps as dim as tallow dips in the comparison. This demand has been fully met by the introduction of the Sun Lamps. They are necessarily made of metal because the draft or chimney extends down through the center of the lamp. The wicks are five inches wide and give a light of forty-five candle power, equal to three gas burners. These lamps were brought out at the close of last season, but the price was so high—$6 each—but few were sold. Owing to the enormous demand which has sprung up, they are now produced at a price within the reach of all, and sold for $3 in brass and $3.50 in nickel, complete with ten-inch porcelain shade. To persons troubled with weak eyes or those who desire to preserve their eyesight by means of a good light, the Sun Lamp will prove a blessing.

The New Styles of Hanging Lamps are made of a gold color solid bronze metal, and trimmed with cut glass prisms and decorated shades. The dome-shaped shades look the best, but we imagine the angle of reflection from the cone shape is best for throwing light down. These lamps are also much cheaper than last year. They are now sold at from $5 to $7 each. Fine table lamps are furnished with duplex or two-wick burners, giving double the light of the single wick burners. There are many styles of these lamps on exhibition, including solid bronze and the popular hammered brass. For information received thanks are due Messrs. H. Leonard & Sons, importers, 16 Monroe street.
